

PERSONA / SAME HISTORY CLASS

Evan Kim

A debate-minded junior who wants history to sharpen his arguments, connect to today, and help him speak with confidence.

AGE	16
GRADE	11th
CONTEXT	Male student / debate club
TIME	Deep work on weekends, quick review before class
DEVICE	Laptop for writing, phone for source checks

COMPARATIVE LENS source bias claims + evidence continuity/change power + resistance modern parallels

WANTS

- Build stronger claims for essays, debates, and class discussions
- Connect past conflicts to current events without oversimplifying
- Spot bias, propaganda, and missing voices in sources
- Feel prepared to defend an interpretation with evidence

FRICTIONS

- Gets frustrated when lessons reward recall more than reasoning
- Needs help comparing sources without drowning in details
- Finds group projects uneven when roles are vague
- Can sound confident before the evidence is fully organized

LEARNS BY

- Arguing both sides before choosing a position
- Sorting primary sources by motive, audience, and reliability
- Using timelines to test cause, consequence, and continuity
- Rehearsing short verbal explanations before writing

DESIGN FOR

- Claim-builder prompts that force evidence before opinion
- Source face-offs: whose account is stronger, and why?
- Debate roles with clear constraints and region-specific stakes
- Current-event bridges that compare patterns without flattening context

" I don't just want the answer. I want to prove why my answer holds up. EVAN